Finally we get a photograph of our boys in the actual work of strafing the Hun in the front line trenches. The wires have brought us word that they were there and from the despatches it is figured they are holding the sector indicated on the map-a part of the front line in

From the photograph it may be deduced that the boys have not a warm spot. The trench coats are all buttoned up tightly at the neck and the rifles on the edge of the trench rest in snow.
